Re: Contributions of the Astronomical Observatory Skalnaté Pleso— covered by Scopus

Dear Prof Jan Svoren ,

We would like to take this opportunity to thank you for providing Elsevier Bibliographic Databases with a complimentary print subscription in 2008 to the journal noted above.

We are pleased to continue coverage of your title in 2009 in the database(s) listed and would like to request renewal of the complimentary subscription. If possible, please change the current print subscription to an online only subscription. We are trying to move to online subscriptions to save our participating publishers costs, and also to ensure we cover your content as soon as possible. Please inform us via email how to make the transfer to online possible (bd-scm@elsevier.com) or fill in the attached form. Unless we hear otherwise, we will assume that you will continue to provide print issues in 2009.

Your cooperation will ensure continued abstract & indexing (A&I) coverage by Elsevier Bibliographic Databases. Databases include EMBASE, Compendex, GEOBASE, EMBiology, Elsevier BIOBASE, FLUIDEX, World Textiles, Illumin8 and Scopus which is the world's largest abstract and citation database of research literature across all subject areas and quality web sources. For further details, please visit www.elsevier.com (click on bibliographic databases) and <http://www.info.scopus.com/detail/what/publishers/>.

Inclusion in A&I databases increases dissemination of authors' work because linking technologies drive additional traffic to individual articles, promoting journal brand awareness and subscription sales. Our databases include standard A&I data, including references and header information. Please note that we do not provide any full text or content to third parties.

Feel free to contact me for additional information or to inform us of any changes concerning the publication or your contact details. Thank you in advance for your continued cooperation.

Sincerely,

Jaqui Mason, D.Phil
